The Quantum Suicide of Sophie Miller* in the News

CLIFTON, VIRGINIA. The Quantum Suicide of Sophie Miller, the latest feature film from independent studio RiverBend Films, has been spotlighted lately in local media outlets in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area—the first of hopefully numerous opportunities for media exposure. A brief news story, along with an online feed of the early teaser trailer, ran in the Fairfax Station Patch (<http://fairfaxstation.patch.com/articles/film-crew-puts-clifton-in-the-spotlight>) on 23 April 2012, which included interviews with producer Darrell Poe and director Kevin G. Bender. A long podcast interview with writer Matthew Marcus, director Kevin G. Bender, and producer Darrell Poe was an integral part of the IndieCapitol podcast on 30 April 2012. IndieCapitol.net, the site which hosts the IndieCapitol podcast, is a website dedicated to highlighting and promoting independent films made in the D.C. metro area (<http://indiecapitol.podbean.com/2012/04/29/episode-6-angels-suicide>).

The Quantum Suicide of Sophie Miller remains in principal photography through mid-June 2012, and after completion of all major photography will go into post-production. The producers anticipate a completion date of late-2012, with entries into film festivals to follow in 2013 with public DVD release anticipated in late-2013.
